"'An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure' is an old and time honored saw, but it is one parents would do well to remember in these days of croup, measles and diph-theria," said a prominent physician recently to a reporter. "One of the first safeguards against disease is pure air and exercise. Nothing increases the activity of the lungs like bodily exercise, and in order that it may be beneficial to the whole system it should be carried on in the open air. Some of them are too young to leave the nursery, and it is here that their little lives are very often imperiled by ignorant mothers and nurses. Gas and paraffine lamps should never be used in the nursery. In almost every room where gas is burned a plant will droop and die. Children are like plants; they require above all things pure air, light and sunshine—not gaslight, but daylight, sunlight, and as much of it as Trip Made Under Peculiar Difficulties Fighting the Dangerous Drowsiness Passengers Kept Alive by Vigorou Thumping-Waking a Woman.

The drivers and passengers on the stage lines running out of this town have had this winter some of the worst experiences ever known in this section. The storms have been of long duration and of great severity, and the cold has been extreme. Sandy Fellows, one of the drivers on the Helena route, who had a deperate time in getting through the other day, and was laid up at Helena for a time, has returned here, and tells how he managed to get his passengers out of the managed to get his passengers out of the blizzard without loss. "In his busiest days," he says, "John Sulli-van never did the slugging in forty-eight hours that I did. If it wasn't for these tender fingers, which were frozen a little, I wouldn't be much afraid to tackle him myself. I find that I have worked up a muscle that is some-thing terrific, and all as a result of that trip, When we set out for Helena I had on beard five men and one woman. One of the men was a discharged soldier, another was a cowboy and the others were prospectors, I guess. For awhile the weather wasn't bad, but pretty soon it began to grow cold, and the wind was so high that the flying snow be came almost blinding.

ALL WENT TO SLEEP.

"After I had been driving along for a while I became conscious that the weather was getting more and more sovere. It was taking to shrink me up with all the stuff I had on it might be going hard with the crowd inside. So I concluded to get down and look in. Great Christopher, young man, every one of them, except the woman, was asleep, and she looked kind of drowsy. Well, you ought to have seen me hunt them out of that. I took one at a time, and, as I whirled him around, I lifted him one under the ear and gave kim another one in the jaw. Pretty soon I had them all out in the snow, except the woman, and she was practically stiff. What to do with her I didn't know. At first I tried to coax her out, but she shooed me off. Then I appealed to the men to help me get her out, but they were still too sleepy and stupid. Then I get mad and says: 'You've get to come out of that, my fine lady,' and I gave her a very start a liftle life tutcher. By put a little life into her. By true intending to lick me. I have to stand that sort of a and her knew I racket, horase I had been there before; but be was a hitle stiffer than I was, and, after I had given him a few more wipes across the ear, he became more reasonable. Just as he was picking himself up, I told him why I was bruising him, and that if he wanted to lick anybody he would have an elegant opportu-nity by helping me wake up the other fel-lows. That seemed to strike him favorably, and we went at the men, occasionally giving ho woman a run. "I fairly wore myself out on that soldier. He was tough. The more I hammered the stupider he got, until I finally gave him one in the mouth that made him see stars. By this time the other men had been pretty well aroused, and leaving the soldier to the cowboy, who asked the privilege of pasting him a few times, I turned my attention to the woman. She was crying, and did not seem to know just where she was or what ailed us. boy, who asked the privilege of pasting him a few times, I turned my attention to the woman. She was crying, and did not seem to know just where she was or what ailed us. I spoke to her kindly, and tried to explain, but it was no use. She was as far gone as she well could be. I took hold of her and ran her back and forth, half carrying her, until I got tired, and then I made the men that we had waked up do the same thing, so as to put their blood in circulation. She seemed to improve a little under the treatment, and we possible. The nursery in my house is the largest and sunniest room under the roof. In it there are no heavy hangings to hold the dust and obscure the light, nor are there any gas pipes. Gas is injurious in many ways. Its light is too strong for a babe's eyes; it absorbs all the pure air in the room before the while their blood in circulation. She seemed to improve a little under the treatment, and we kept it up natil I came to the conclusion that she must be wide enough awake to go on for a ways. Telling the men to keep a sharp lookout on her, and to be careful themselves how they let drowsiness get the better of them, I got on the box and drove on.

POUNDING THE PASSENGERS. "I had an idea that I was then somewhere near Twenty-eight-mile station, and I knew that I must reach that place before dark unless I wanted to drive in with a load of dead folls. So I whipped up the horses-they were stiff enough too, by this time—and we got over considerable ground. The wind had gone down some and it was easier to see the country. I was having great faith in my ability to reach the station when I heard the cowboy yelling that I must stop. The soldier had failon asleep again. I got down and yanked the fellow out, and as I did so the cowboy asked under his breath if he could polish him off. I told him to go in, and the way that he did it was a caution. As I saw him munling the chap I came to the conclusion that ho might have a grudge against him, and so I stopped him, after intimating rest much. The cowboy gasped for breath a few times and said: 'I never had nothing against this particular soldier, but he'll do, in the absence of any others.' After that I attended to the pounding myself, and I had plenty of were stiff enough too, by this time—and we got over considerable ground. Never Since the Flood

Have the people of Wichita experienced such a Clothing Sensation as produced by the introduction of our Fine Tailor Made Clothing. It is not an experiment but a grand success.

It Has Come to Stay

And save big tailor bills. It is utter'v impossible for anyone who has the least pride in dress to be indifferent to it. It improves your personal appearance and saves you money. Stubborn, indeed, is a man who adhers to a set opinion based on prejudice who will not allow reason to act, who will not come and with his own eyes see our large stock of imported goods made up in the latest styles by the best tailors in the country under the immediate supervision of the finest cutters in the land. Exclamations of surprise that they far surpass all expectations in quality, fit, make and trim are the truthful and candid admissions daily received.

We Know by Experience

The kind of clothing that, jolly, romping, rollicking boys need, and have accordingly purchased a large stock of the very best the country affords for all classes, consisting of everything to be found in the market for boys from two years old up to eighteen years old and have our boy's and children's department entirely seperate from the men's. This we find the ladies appreciate very much as they can quietly sit down with their children and select at their leisure such goods as are best adapted to their wants. It is conceded by the best judges that we have by far the largest, most complete and the finest stock of furnishing goods ever shown west of the Mississippi river. We would especially coult your attention to our

Elegant Stock of Neck Wear
